

FLIGHT CANCELLATION POLICY

General policy for flight bookings. Specific airline fare rules may override these guidelines.

1. Cancellation Timeframes

Passengers may request cancellation before the scheduled departure time. Cancellation requests made after departure are treated as no-shows and are generally non-refundable.

2. Cancellation Charges

Cancellation Window	Typical Charge	Refund
More than 48 hours before departure	No cancellation fee	Eligible fare value refunded, less any non-refundable taxes/charges
24–48 hours before departure	20% of ticket fare	Remaining eligible amount refunded
Less than 24 hours before departure	50% of ticket fare	Remaining eligible amount refunded
After scheduled departure / no-show	Generally non-refundable	Only refundable taxes or airline-approved amounts may be returned

3. Refund Processing

Approved refunds are normally returned to the original payment method within 7–10 business days after the airline or travel provider confirms the cancellation. Processing time may vary by bank or payment provider.

4. Non-Refundable Fares

Tickets marked non-refundable are not eligible for a refund of the base fare after cancellation. Where permitted by the airline, eligible government taxes and fees may be refunded.

5. Airline-Initiated Cancellation

If the airline cancels a flight or makes a qualifying schedule change, the passenger may be eligible for a full refund, rebooking, or travel credit according to the airline's applicable rules.

6. Special Circumstances

Medical emergencies, bereavement, severe weather, government restrictions, or other exceptional events may qualify for different cancellation terms when supported by appropriate documentation and approved by the airline.

Important: This document is a sample knowledge-base policy created for testing an AI/RAG system. It is not an actual airline policy. Always verify the fare conditions and airline-specific rules before processing a cancellation.